"Epanutin" is a compound which whilst exerting a marked anti-convulsant action in epilepsy has relatively little hypnotic effect. Chemically, "Epanutin" is the sodium salt of 5.5 diphenyl hydantoin, and it is analogous to the barbiturates, being a derivative of glycolyl urea whereas the barbiturates are associated with malonyl urea. It is an odourless, white or cream-coloured powder, soluble in water, and has a bitter taste.

In clinical experiments* "Epanutin" has been shown to prevent, or greatly decrease, the incidence and severity of convulsive seizures in a substantial percentage of epileptics—without producing the hypnotic and narcotic effects exerted by many anti-convulsant drugs.

"Epanutin" is supplied by Parke, Davis & Company in bottles of 100 x 1½ gr. capsules. The dosage recommended for all cases of epilepsy over six years is one capsule before each of the three regular meals.

*The clinical evaluation of sodium diphenyl hydantoinate was the subject of a review by Putnam and Merrit of the Harvard Medical School and Boston City Hospital, Neurological Unit, at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association in June 1938.

We have received from Pharmaceutical Specialities (May & Baker) Ltd., a copy of another publication on M. & B. M. & B. 693. This 16 page booklet, in Gonococcal Infections 693 which is entitled, "M. & B. Infections 693 in Gonococcal Infections," is a complementary publication to "M. & B. 693 in Pneumococcal Infections," and "M. & B. 693 Biological and Biochemical Data."

We understand from the manufacturers that they delayed bringing "M. & B. 693" to the notice of venereologists until they were satisfied that the use of this product marked a real advance in the chemotherapy of that disease. This booklet which they have now produced represents the pooled results of observations in over 1,000 cases.

Copies of this publication are available medical practitioners on request to the manufacturers at Dagenham.
