
British Journal of Obstetrics and Gynaecology

Published on behalf of the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists

Editor

F.E. Hytten London

The British Journal of Obstetrics and Gynaecology has been published since 1902 when it began as the Journal of Obstetrics and Gynaecology of the British Empire. Regarded as the premier organ of the specialty in Britain, it publishes papers from throughout Europe and from an increasingly wide circle of international contributors. The Journal is aimed at both the practising clinician and the clinical scientist and the core content consists of reports of original work in obstetrics and gynaecology and related subjects such as human reproductive physiology and contraception.

Infection Pocket Consultant

R.T.D. Emond, J.M. Bradley and N.S. Galbraith

'This small pocket size book on infection must be a welcome companion to those who are involved in the management of some of the more common, and not so common, infections...

I am sure this synopsis of microbial infections will find a wide readership among workers who are involved in the care, treatment and prevention of these infections.' Journal of District Nursing

Essentials of Preventive Medicine

J.A. Muir Gray MD, MB, ChB, DPH and Godfrey Fowler BM, FRCGP

In recent years there has been a growth of interest in preventive medicine, stimulated by the scope of prevention revealed by epidemiology and by appreciation of the role of doctors and other professionals as health educators. This practical text is designed to summarise current knowledge of the measures available in prevention of illness and disease, concentrating on prevention in adult life. The approach is tailored for ease of assimilation and consultation, with extensive use of lists, graphs, diagrams and histograms, and the book will be of great practical value to medical students, nurses and health visitors, and health education officers.

1984, 224 pages, 56 illustrations.
