

Appendix 1: questionnaire

Item 1: video consultation is useful to improve communication skills in patient encounters

Item 2: video consultation is useful to improve verbal communication skills

Item 3: video consultation is useful to improve non verbal communication skills

Item 4: video consultation is always uncomfortable for the patient

Item 5: in daily practice, I use communications strategies on a regular base

Item 6: in video consultations authenticity and spontaneity are lost

Item 7: video consultations are impractical (camera, software, patient consent, ...) and therefore not feasible to repeat on a regular base

Item 8: Being evaluated by a fellow student is unpleasant

Item 9: Evaluation by fellow students helps me to improve my own communication skills

Item 10: Evaluating fellow students helps me to improve my own communication skills

Item 11: Video consultations do not reflect reality

Item 12: Generally, I am positive regarding video consultations

Item 13: Video consultation are to be used more frequently as a teaching method

Item 14: Which method was most effective in learning communication skills:

- Theory
- Observing internship
- Role play
- Consultation under supervision
- Video consultation